DO YOU NEED A TUTOR OR AN ACADEMIC COACH?

When I sit down to do homework, study, or write a paper, I can easily find my textbook, notes, and other materials.

A. Sometimes
B. Never
C. Most of the time

I have enough time to focus on my schoolwork or job.

A. Some of the time
B. Not really
C. Most of the time

I schedule specific times for schoolwork or studying.

A. Sometimes
B. Never
C. Most of the time

I have trouble starting once I sit down to study.

A. It depends on the class
B. Most of the time, regardless of the class
C. Not usually

I spend more time than I’d like on homework.

A. It depends on the class
B. Most of the time, regardless of the class
C. Not usually

When I start an assignment, I become distracted easily.

A. Sometimes
B. Most of the time
C. Not usually

I’m worried about how to balance school, work, and my personal life.

A. It depends on my course load for each term
B. Yes
C. No
RESULTS

Mostly As: An academic peer or professional tutor may be worth considering this year. The Carey Student Success Center has National Tutoring Association certified tutors who have excellent academic records and earned at least an A in the courses they are tutoring, or who have already earned a master’s or doctorate degree. More information about The Student Success Center and its tutoring services is on the website.

Mostly Bs: You may want to consider working with an academic coach this year. Academic coaches can help with study strategies, academic skills, and connect you to Carey resources to support your success academically, professionally, and personally. For more information on academic coaching and to request an appointment, email carey.tutoring@jhu.edu.

Mostly Cs: You don’t appear to need a tutor or an academic coach right now. If anything changes or you’d like to make an appointment with one anyway, visit our website or email carey.tutoring@jhu.edu.